To whom it may concern,

Below is a story of human ignorance at a child's level regarding the re-licensing of Lake Almanor and the North Fork of the Feather river watershed/ Project 2015. The state and federal government, PG&E, all groups and the public need to communicate better, be treated equal, have access to minutes from ALL meetings and be properly mailed questionnaires, if the state expects re-licensing to be successful. I feel it would be a bad decision to sacrifice a list of animals and plants that would fill a whole page over a cheap and easy way to acquire more water. I would tell someone with that level of ignorance to not stand out in the pouring rain and look straight up for too long. They may drown.

5 kids and a birthday party.

There was a birthday party with 5 kids. The first kid planned the party and decided to charge all the kids at the door because no matter how many presents they received it was never enough because of their greed and inability to plan a party properly in the first place. PG&E.

The second kid was concerned they would not have enough cake because of their greedy appetite. They decided to oversee portioning out the birthday cake. They were sloppy and dropped most of their cake on the floor while eating it anyway, so they needed at least one extra piece of cake. State Water Resources Control Board.

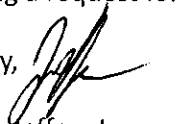

The third kid wanted to control all the games the kids played at the party because they did not agree with all birthday games. They did not have a good reason to not like certain birthday games. It was only what they wanted regarding birthday games. Conservation groups.

The fourth kid is looking forward to the party and future parties because their dad rents out his Bouncy house. They do not want to see their dad's business suffer and will do anything to protect their dad's business. Tourism groups.

The fifth kid is just there to enjoy the party with the other kids, treat others equally and share. But they receive no voice or recognition at the party even though they bring the best and most expensive gift. The people of the Lake Almanor basin.

The fifth kid that REALLY loves birthday parties says, "this party sucks". They ask "why didn't the first kid (party planner) send out a questionnaire or suggestion form ahead of time to at least act like they cared about everyone equally enjoying the party without discrimination"? Maybe a questionnaire not resembling a request for a donation?

Sincerely,

Jeffrey Leseur
